By Emeritus Professor Balfour. (Read 13th April 1882.) Sir Charles Wyville Thomson was born at Bonsyde, near Linlithgow, on the 5th of March 1830. His early studies were prosecuted at Merchiston Castle Academy, under the superintendence of Mr Charles Chalmers. In 1845 he commenced his medical studies in the University of Edinburgh. But he soon stepped aside into the special pursuits of Natural Science. In 1847 he joined the Botanical Society; and soon after became Secretary of the Royal Physical Society. In 1850 he attended my class of botany in the University of Edinburgh. In the same year he obtained a Lectureship of Botany in Kings College, Aberdeen; and in the following year he was appointed Professor of Botany in Marischal College and University. He afterwards received the degree of LL. D. from the University of Aberdeen. The subject of Natural History in its various departments was his study; and even at that period of his career he became an eminent specialist in these subjects. A vacancy having occurred in the Professorship of Natural History in Queens College, Cork, Thomson was appointed to the office in August 1853. Soon after, however, a vacancy occurred in the Professorship of Mineralogy and Geology in the Queens College, Belfast, and Wyville Thomson was transferred to it in September 1854. He then taught all the branches of Natural History during a long residence at Belfast. During this period he also distinguished...
