Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: . . . stated to me this morning that if a man could come to one of these meetings with a new story--one of the kind that has a catch to it--it would be worth 500 to a certain department of the hotel. I have just come from the meeting of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, at Richmond, and while there heard a story closely associated with the pending political campaign. It appears that in June last, a negro in the city of Richmond approached several white citizens, and addressing one of them as Boss wanted to know who the Republicans nominated for President in Chicago, and upon being informed that they had nominated Mr. Hughes, he promptly replied Boss, who do you think the white folkses is going to nominate I told this story to a lady friend, who is rather strong in her political opinions, and she took some exceptions to it; thereupon I felt it necessary to tell her one to bring her back into a good, happy mood. This story likewise came from Richmond, and was to the effect that a negro, in offering to cast his vote, was confronted with the educational qualification which consisted of being compelled to read the Constitution of the United States, and answer any question pertaining thereto. He read the Constitution readily enough, as he had it committed, but when asked what Habeas Corpus meant, he was compelled to hesitate, and finally, upon being told that it was...
